

HE LIVED IN DREAD OF AUTOS AND THEY GOT HIM AT LAST

Death Under Wheels of Whirling Machine the One Terror of Albert Clady's Life.

All his life Albert Clady was afraid of automobiles. He never could get used, he said, to the whirring of the monster as they went rushing by, heaving their hoarse cries, sending his heart into his throat and making him jump for his life. Some day, he said, he knew that one of them would get him. He felt it in his bones.

His fears were verified this morning when he was run down and killed in Fifth avenue.

And the machines acted as if they were bound to get him, as he feared, for there were two of them. The first caught him and lifted him fifteen feet in the air, and as he fell the second ran over him.

Clady was employed by the Krinke Car Supply Company. He was on one of their wagons, driven by Gus Geiss, which was loaded down with campstoves. Near Sixty-third street Geiss stopped the wagon and told Clady to go into Central Park and telephone a message to the store. Clady started to cross Fifth avenue. The beautiful morning had brought out crowds of pedestrians, most of them women and children. Nurses wheeled perambulators, children laughing and playing at their sides. A steam of vehicles ebbed and flowed along the avenue, through which automobiles darted.

The driver's helper gave a quick look to the right and another to the left and was in the thick of the stream. An automobile owned by P. A. Valentini of No. 1 east Sixty-ninth street and driven by Chauffeur J. P. Birdener was going north. Clady didn't see the machine and the driver saw it too late to slacken his speed. He was struck and sent whirling through the air. As he fell the limousine of Robert Guggenheim of No. 42 Fifth avenue, driven by Chauffeur

William Ridgway, came tearing south. The chauffeur applied the emergency brakes, but the machine's headway could not be checked, and the wheels passed over the body of the prostrate man. Both cars stopped and the chauffeurs ran to Clady. Policemen Brantigan telephoned for a Presbyterian Hospital ambulance and when it arrived Dr. McGuire shook his head and said that there was no chance for life. Clady died on the way to the hospital. Five ribs were broken, there was a rupture of the left lung and fractures of the right shoulder, the spine and the base of the skull. Geiss, the driver of the wagon, told the policeman that death was due to an accident which could not have been avoided by either chauffeur, and the drivers of the machines told the same story. No arrests were made. The dead man was forty-three years old and lived at the Hotel Elkwood, in Tenth avenue, between Forty-second and Forty-third streets.

HOUSE REFUSES TO REPASS VETOED IMMIGRATION BILL.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The House today refused, by a vote of 213 to 114, to pass the Dillingham-Burnett Immigration bill over the President's veto. Five votes changed from the negative to the affirmative would have given the two-thirds necessary to override the veto. The Senate yesterday repassed the measure by a vote of 72 to 18.

WILSON HELPS DRAW UP MORE REFORM BILLS.

Completes His Programme for Present Legislature and Will Work to Push It Through.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 18.—The Democratic members of the New Jersey Legislature, in conference with Gov. Wilson as the "centre of counsel," as he calls it, today decided to enact legislation at this session providing for:

Indorsement of the direct election of United States Senators. Primary elections for all officers that will permit voters to express a first and second choice (the Wisconsin plan). The appointment by the Governor of jury commissioners to draw grand and petit juries. The conference lasted two hours and took the form of a general discussion in which Gov. Wilson took the leading part. There was no division in the vote for direct election of Senators or for the Wisconsin primary plan. The jury legislation was approved by a vote of 34 to 18. At present jurors are drawn by the Sheriff. This will practically complete the Wilson program for the present legislature. Every effort will be made to get it through before the Governor resigns on March 1.

"BIG 6'S" 63D BALL.

Few organizations in New York are there that for nearly two-thirds of a century have each year given a ball. One such is Typographical Union No. 6, commonly known as "Big Six," which on Friday evening will entertain its members and their friends at the sixty-third annual reception and ball of the historic printers' local.

The event will take place in the Seventy-first Regiment Armory and the proceeds will be added to the hospital fund of the union. An elaborate programme, which includes several novel features, has been prepared for the occasion.
